ANNOUNCING COACHING FOR EFFECTIVE TEACHING

REGISTER AT WWW.EATONRESA.ORG/PRODEVELOPMENT/

OCTOBER 17, 18, 19, 2017

Effective coaching can help schools maintain lasting excellence for all Michigan teachers. With the current press for accountability in education, the need for professional conversation is essential to have teachers who successfully navigate the complexities of instruction, the heart of teaching and learning. It is in this arena that Coaching for Effective Teaching makes its greatest contribution. MSU's Coaching for Effective Teaching is a model that teaches coaches how to use specific skills of active listening to intentionally influence teachers' thinking to impact their instruction. MSU's Coaching for Effective Teaching Team formerly provided coaching support for Michigan educators through the Coaching 101 program funded by the Michigan Department of Education and its grant fiscal agents.

This process is done through the mediational coaching conversation where the coach positions themselves between a teacher and their thinking. This conversation might be about some perplexing event, problem, conflict, challenge or issue to assist the coachee's thinking (i.e. gathering information, analyzing, reflecting, organizing, planning, and clarifying). Regardless of the issue, it moves the teacher to action. A change in teachers' thinking changes their practice. Charlotte Danielson (2015) highlights that "unless they make their own instructional decisions, teachers are far less likely to make deep and lasting changes in their instructional practices."
